Lakesha's strength lies in the integration of interior and structure. Her trademark style is evident through the sophisticated use of texture, color, and light, and every home she designs receives her personal signature of timeless elegance and innovative simplicity.

This Chicago condominium was originally decorated using dark colors. The first change was L Rose Interior Design created a custom rug. Their design was thoughtful because of the 30-year-old Steinway piano which is why you see the hints of black. They created two seating areas - one for conversation the other for listening to in-home concerts. They changed the yellow wall color and brightened it by using a creamy white that highlights the Chicago lakeview and played with lots of fabric patterns to complement each other. The result was sophisticated, tailored, and happy.
